SLATER'S BEER – WHAT ALL THE MPs ARE DRINKING!

Stafford's Labour MP David Kidney is arranging for Slaters' beer to be served on draught at Parliament's famous Strangers Bar from next Monday for a week. This means that a taste of Stafford will be brought to Westminster for MPs and their guests to enjoy.

David Kidney explains that he is pleased to be helping this small business:

"I knew of the fine reputation of the Slater family's ales when they were a micro-brewery in Eccleshall. Earlier this year the brewery moved to St. Alban's Road, Stafford as the business expanded. I was pleased to visit the family and view the new facilities. I believe that it is part of an MP's job to welcome new businesses, encourage them to grow and to assure them of their local MP's support.

"The Slater family took me up on my offer of support immediately. They asked me if I could get their beer served in Parliament. I took up the challenge, and sure enough, next week a fine Slater's Real Ale will be on sale in our very popular Strangers Bar.

"It is my pleasure to support this enterprising family business in this way, and I am looking forward to buying the Slater family pints of their own beer when they come to Strangers Bar on Tuesday. I hope that this outlet for their product helps them to establish their range of beers all the more firmly and I wish them continued success".
